

Financial Abuse of Elderly is a Crime in Kansas

How to Spot Financial Exploitation in Elder Care: Red Flags and Prevention

Kansas has an elder abuse statute (K.S.A. 21-5417) that makes it a crime to take money from elders who are 60 or older and for powers of attorney to misuse funds.

Do you know someone who is being financially abused by a trusted person or power of attorney? It's no longer a "family issue." It is a crime.

Indicators of financial abuse

- A recent contact expresses an interest in finances, promises to give care, or cozies up with the elder.
- A relative or caregiver has no visible means of support and is overly interested in the elder's financial affairs.
- A relative or caregiver is hesitant to spend money for needed medical treatment for the elder.
- The utility and other bills are not being paid.
- The elder's placement, care, or possessions clash with the size of his or her estate.
- A relative or caregiver isolates the elder, makes excuses when friends or family call or visit, and does not give the elder messages.
- A relative or caregiver gives unlikely reasons about finances, and the elder is unaware of or unable to explain the arrangements made.
- Checking account and credit card statements are sent to a relative or caregiver and are not open to the elder.
- At the bank, the elder is escorted by a relative or caregiver who refuses to let the elder speak for him- or herself. The elder appears nervous or afraid of the person going with him or her.
- The elder is concerned or confused about "missing money."
- There are suspicious signatures on the elder's checks, or the elder signs checks and another party fills in the payee and amount sections.
- There is an odd amount of banking activity, mainly just after joint accounts are set up or someone new starts helping with the elder's finances.

- A will, power of attorney, or other legal document is drafted, but the elder does not understand its effects.
