What if I want to talk to a lawyer about my situation or discuss these forms with a lawyer?

Kansas Legal Services has a program that assists self-represented litigants (persons who represent themselves) before they go to court.

- Through this program, a self-represented litigant who uses these Kansas Legal Services forms can meet with an attorney to have the forms reviewed, discuss the court process and what they may encounter as a self-represented litigant.
- Our goal is to empower you to represent yourself successfully.
- This program is only available for the areas of law where KLS provides interactive forms and only for users of the KLS forms.
- The cost of this program can range from free to $80 an hour, depending on income.

- We will meet with persons who are just filing their case, filing a reply or who have prepared a final decree of divorce.
- You must be able to meet with a Kansas Legal Services or volunteer lawyer during office hours. If you are unable to travel to a KLS office, we may be able to review documents and discuss them over the phone.
- If you are interested, you should indicate that during the preparation of divorce forms through the interactive interview.
 - During the interactive interview, you will receive instructions about how to apply for this service.
